Join us for the Co-Productive Research Ecologies workshop on 13th June at Friends House, hosted by The Bartlett, UCL. Designed for early, mid, or established career researchers, this one-day event offers a unique opportunity to enhance your research environment and expand your professional network. Envision the research ecosystem as a forest, where participants at various growth stages—from seedlings to mature trees—come together. This workshop promises to foster a vibrant exchange of ideas and collaboration, encouraging resilience and productivity within the research community. Gain insights from esteemed researchers and build a cooperative and thriving research landscape.
